

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a method for qualitative determination of low molecular soluble CD14 proteins separately. The present invention also provides antibodies specific to high molecular soluble CD14 proteins. Further, the present invention provides a measurement method for specifically determining the quality or quantity of high molecular soluble CD14 proteins using the antibodies with high sensitivity, simplicity and specificity.

05806158 032804